It should thus come as no surprise to the reader that the contributors to the present volume have been guided more by Professor Lust's multiplicity of interests than by the flexible guidelines of the editors. The contributions here published, therefore, represent a rich harvest of studies dealing with the Septuagint in general and with the Septuagint of Ezekiel in particular. In addition to these, text-critical, philological, lexicographical and theological topics faithfully reflect the wide range of Johan Lust's interests. Thirty studies from some of the most prominent colleagues in the field have been arranged in a simple alphabetical order according to the author's name.

The editors and other contributors to the volume feel that they represent scholars all over the world who hold Professor Lust and his work in high esteem. They wish him many years of fruitful work.
