I AM GRATEFUL to all the contributors to this volume for their participation in it and their personal encouragement. My greatest debt, however, is to Kenneth P. Minkema, the executive editor of The Works of Jonathan Edwards. He provided with unfailing grace and efficiency the information and advice which I sought, even when, for about a month or so, I interrupted him with almost daily phone calls. His knowledge of Edwards is nothing less than astonishing. I also want to thank Harry S. Stout, the general editor of The Works of Jonathan Edwards, for his support and encouragement with all of my Edwards projects.

I am deeply indebted to Thomas W. Gillespie, former president of Princeton Theological Seminary, and Eun H. Kim-Nam for their financial assistance, without which the publication of this volume would not have been possible.

My gratitude also goes to the staff at Princeton University Press: Fred Appel, religion editor, for his confidence in this volume and his wise counsel from its inception onward; Debbie Tegarden, production editor, for her meticulous and caring guidance throughout the editing and production phase; and Jennifer Nippins, an editorial assistant, for her thorough and friendly reminders. I am also indebted to Vicky Wilson-Schwartz for her expert and resourceful copyediting.

I want also to thank Kil Jae Park and Jeffrey Waddington for helping me in preparing the manuscript. I am thankful to John E. Smith for permission to reprint here his essay "Christian Virtue and Common Morality," which was originally published in John E. Smith, Jonathan Edwards: Puritan, Preacher, Philosopher (London: Geoffrey Chapman, 1992); to the editors of William and Mary Quarterly for permission to reprint Janice Knight's essay on typology, originally published in that journal in 1991 as "Learning the Language of God: Jonathan Edwards and the Typology of Nature"; and to Oxford University Press for permission to reprint Harry S. Stout's essay "The Puritans and Edwards" from Jonathan Edwards and the American Experience, edited by Nathan O. Hatch and Harry S. Stout (Oxford University Press, 1998).

Without the support and cooperation of one's family, it would hardly be possible to accomplish scholarly research and publication. I would like to thank my wife, Inn Sook, for her frequent words of encouragement, and my son, Cy Suh Hyong, for his genuine interest in my writing and publishing endeavors.
