This book would not have seen the light of day without the input of the programme co-ordinators, research assistants and fieldworkers of the Sinomlando Centre for Oral History and Memory Work in Africa, a research and community development centre of the School of Religion and Theology at the University of KwaZulu-Natal, whose work paved the way for this project. Particular mention should be made of Humphrey Mogashoa, James Worthington and Abraham Lieta, who contributed to the first drafts of the oral history manual currently used by the Sinomlando Centre for its training workshops.

We also need to acknowledge the financial assistance of the National Research Foundation and the Department of Arts and Culture in Tshwane (formerly Pretoria), which funded essential aspects of the common work, including the seminar held in Pietermaritzburg in May 2006 at which the authors discussed the contents of the book.

The process that led to the writing of this book was long but fruitful. A special thanks to all the authors for working tirelessly on their respective chapters and keeping all the editorial deadlines.

Lastly, we owe a word of gratitude to Tom Cannell, who read and commented on many chapters of this book, to the anonymous reviewers of the original manuscript who made very useful suggestions and to Glenn Cowley, Sally Hines and Alison Lockhart at the University of KwaZulu-Natal Press who did not spare their efforts during the last phase of the book's production.
