The volume has been prepared from the papers presented at the Conference on Natural Law held at the University of Navarra (Spain) in March 2006, in the context of the annual Philosophical Meetings organized by its Department of Philosophy, with the support of the School of Humanities and Social Sciences, and the Institute of Business and the Humanities. In particular, I want to thank Alejandro García, Jose María Torralba and Mario Silar, both for their invaluable contribution in the organization of the conference and for the editorial work which followed it. Since some of the papers were originally written in Spanish, Italian or German, part of the editorial work has involved the translation and revision of the texts. At this stage, Ann Hannigan's contribution has proved decisive. Thanks to her hard work, the reader will be now able to get a true overview of contemporary and international perspectives on natural law.
