ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The Lovis Corinth Colloquia are made possible by the generous gift of Kay Corinth, in whose memory the co-editors wish to dedicate this volume. We are likewise grateful for the keen interest shown by her sister Mary Sargent. At Emory University, Clark Poling, Professor Emeritus of Art History, provided the vision and practical experience that helped make the Lovis Corinth Endowment a reality. Jean Campbell, Associate Professor of Art History, was instrumental in organizing the first Corinth Colloquium; her acquisition of a Quadrangle Fund grant enabled the participation of John Decker, Shelley MacLaren, Leopoldine Prosperetti, and Todd Richardson. Larry Silver was chief respondent at the conference, and continued to offer advice and support throughout the editorial process. The administrative staff of Emory's Art History Department — Carol Bridges, Angela Economy, and especially the indispensable Toni Rhodes — facilitated every aspect of conference organization. For their unfailing interest and advocacy a further debt of thanks is owed to the department's faculty and graduate students, in particular to a succession of excellent chairs — Clark Poling, Gay Robins, Dorinda Evans, and Judith Rohrer.
