F-33,-60

Contextualization and Syncretism

Navigating Cultural Currents

Editor: Dr. Gailyn Van Rheenen

Evangelical Missiological Society Series Number 13

Copyright 2006 by Evangelical Missiological Society www.missiology.org/EMS

All rights reserved. No part of this work may be reproduced or transmitted in any form or by any means—for example, electronic or mechanical, including photocopying and recording—without prior written permission of the publisher. The only exceptions are brief quotations in printed reviews.

Scripture taken from the HOLY BIBLE, NEW INTERNATIONAL VERSION®. Copyright 8 1973, 1978, 1984 International Bible Society. Used by permission of Zondervan. All rights reserved.

EMS Series No. 13

Cover & Text Design: Todd Thomas

Published by William Carey Library

1605 E. Elizabeth St.

Pasadena, California 91104

www.WCLBooks.com

William Carey Library is a Ministry of the U.S. Center for World Mission, Pasadena, California.

ISBN 0-87808-387-1

Printed in the United States of America

Contents

Foreword by Gailyn Van Rheenen

Page iii Author Profiles

Defining the Issues

Page i

Chapter 1 Syncretism and Contextualization: The Church on a Page 1 Journey Defining Itself

By Gailyn Van Rheenen

Chapter 2 Syncretism and Social Paradigms
Page 31 By Paul H. Hiebert

Chapter 3 Contextualization, Syncretism, and Spiritual Warfare:
Page 47 Identifying the Issues
By Scott Moreau

Chapter 4 Syncretism: Mission and Missionary Induced?
Page 71 By David J. Hesselgrave

Theological Reflections on Syncretism

Chapter 5 The Role of Context in Shaping Theology Page 99 By Steve Strauss

Chapter 6 The Lamb and The Emperor: Theologies
Page 129 of Revelation Countering Syncretism
By Ron Stansell

Case Studies: Contextualization and Syncretism in Living Contexts

Chapter 7 To the Muslim I became a Muslim?
Page 143 By Dudley Woodberry

Chapter 8 Suburban Evangelical Individualism

Chapter 8 Suburban Evangelical Individualism:
Page 159 Syncretism or Contextualization?
By J. Nelson Jennings

Chapter 9 Post-Constantinian Missions: Lessons from Page 179 the Resurgence of Paganism By Michael T. Cooper

Chapter 10 Dwarves, Elves, and Vampires: An Exploration
Page 205 of Syncretism in Metro Manila
By Cynthia A. Strong and David K. Strong

Chapter 11 Revelation in the Chinese Characters:
Page 229 Divine or Divined?
By How Chuang Chua

Chapter 12 "You Must Not Worship in their Way..."

Page 243 When Contextualization Becomes Syncretism
(Syncretism among Messianic Jews)

By Larry Poston

Chapter 13 Legalism – Syncretism From Within
Page 265 A Challenge in the Romanian Church
By Cristian Barbosu

Chapter 14 Syncretism and Identity Among the Page 305 Bayano Kuna By Eric J. Moeller

Chapter 15 Building Bridges to Muslims: A Test Case Page 323 By Gareth Lee Cockerill

Foreword

For many years I have contended that the largest vacuum in Missiology is the study of syncretism and the interrelated perspectives toward contextualization. I am happy to edit a volume which addresses these issues.

The book is timely. We are seeing many changes—from print media to oral transmission, from ahistorical to tradition, from propositionalism to narrative, from rationalism to embodiment, from market to mission, from rallies to relationship (Webber 2002, 7-8). Change permeates the very air we breathe. A few years ago Walter Brueggemann described this developing transition as the creation of a "new interpretive situation" resulting from "a radical shift of categories of culture, for which interpreters of faith in the West have not been well prepared" (1993, 1). Thus, as we transition from a modern to a postmodern era, the issues of contextualization and syncretism are exceptionally significant. Christianity's typical response to times of cataclysmic change is to so accommodate to the culture that the Christian message loses its divine essence.

Such accommodation is not new. Modernity's enthroning humanity and demoting God led Christians to become practicing deists. Because they could not be perceived, studied, and analyzed by the five senses, Biblical teachings about angels, demons, and Satan were considered myths. Even God was relegated to the spiritual realm, where he was allowed little authority over the world he created. Only "natural" powers which can be empirically analyzed were thought to operate in the "natural" world. Paradoxically, people viewed themselves as self-sufficient, not in need of God in the world that he created. Their world was a "closed universe" because natural powers were thought to operate with no interference from the spiritual realm. Even the social sciences, as described by Paul Hiebert in chapter 2, are rooted in humanistic, modern assumptions that either compartmentalize the natural and the supernatural or negate the spiritual realm altogether.

Culture's influence upon Christianity is easier to discern in retrospect than in prospect. If history is our guide, one thing is sure: This age will be as syncretistic as any other. Ancient Israel frequently syncretized the worship of God with that of the gods. Modern, "enlightenment" philosophies focused on the human and disregarded the spiritual. How is the gospel being contextualized in the contemporary world? To what degree are these new contextualizations syncretistic? This book attempts to answer these questions by defining and analyzing contextualization and syncretism.

Read carefully Steve Strauss' seminal writings on the role of context in shaping theology and the need to engage in intercultural theologizing. Examine my definitions of contextualization and syncretism and recontextualizations of the contemporary church in